Excerpt: . . . the faithful who present their children to be baptized, and to the infants themselves who are washed in the holy water. -- The children also receive some advantage from their baptism, their ingraftment into the body of the Church being a more peculiar recommendation of them to the other members; and afterwards, when they grow to years of maturity, it operates upon them as a powerful stimulus to a serious attention to the worship of God, by whom they were accepted as his children, by the solemn symbol of adoption, before they were capable of knowing Him as their Father. It is obvious to remark, that the Reformer speaks here in both instances only of the faithful, by which he means the Elect alone, and their children; but denies that Regeneration, even to them, is the immediate effect of Baptism, still less that it is...
